When founder and managing principal Jeff Pelletier, AIA, CPHC®, launched Board & Vellum, he envisioned a firm grounded in a collaborative process that united architecture, interior design, and landscape architecture while embracing a holistic design ethos with the client firmly at its creative center.

More than 12 years later and boasting an award-winning portfolio of stunning homes, Board & Vellum has grown into a go-to destination for clients seeking a home that functions beautifully and tells their story.

“Telling our clients’ stories is the common theme that runs throughout the homes we’ve created over the years,” Pelletier says. “Every room should tell us something about you.”

From a whimsical reimagining of an older home to a high-performing new build or jewel box addition to an urban backyard, each of the firm’s projects relies on the collaborative energies of an architect, interior designer, and landscape architect. Working hand in hand with clients, the team listens, learns, and crafts unexpected and wholly personal design options.

Pelletier views this multidisciplinary, integrated approach as key to shaping a design that speaks to a client’s passions while seamlessly uniting interior and exterior elements. Project management expertise and systems honed over a decade guide the team’s organic process, allowing for consideration of the myriad details that elevate a home into the personal expression of those who live in it.

“Creating deeply beautiful spaces that resonate emotionally as well as visually is always our goal,” Pelletier says. “Your home should reflect who you are and what you love.”
